

Name of technology: Passive Underground Structures/shelters for multipurpose applications in cold and high altitude areas.

Developed by DRDO Lab/ Estt Name: Armament Research and Development Establishments(ARDE), Pune/ Defence Institute of High Altitude Research (DIHAR), Leh .

Brief Write-up: Ladakh is characterized as extremely harsh terrain with severe cold arid climatic conditions where temperatures reach in subzero. The region also experiences strong winds, low humidity and large variations between day and night temperatures. These extreme conditions affect human survival, lead to deterioration of essential commodities and Functional degradation of machinery due to freezing conditions. Energy requirement is the main concern to maintain desirable temperature in conventional structures/ shelters. Petroleum or diesel-based heating results in heavy exchequer, may lead to health-related and environmental issues, hence not Eco-friendly.

Considering this, Defence Institute of High Altitude Research (DIHAR)- Leh has developed a technology entitled “Passive underground structures/shelters for multipurpose applications in cold and high altitude areas”. This technology is a sustainable and energy-efficient solution for maintaining suitable conditions in extreme environments. It is based on utilization of passive energy by harnessing the geothermal heat which helps in maintaining a relatively stable and positive temperature inside the structure even when the external temperature falls as low as -25 °C. The structure has proper insulation, ventilation systems and sensor based controllers to regulate temperature and humidity as per requirements, ensuring a controlled internal environment suitable for both storage and human habitation.

The store may be utilized for wide range of applications in high altitude and cold conditions including storage of food, medicines and armed weapons: as habitat, command/ control room, MI room, storage of equipment or general materials which are sensitive to low temperature, all weather repairing workshops and parking for vehicles in high altitude and severe cold conditions. Technology data and designs details of the passive underground structures with varying storage capacities and number of storage rooms are available for ToT.
